

A large bonfire at night, with a massive pile of logs and wood burning brightly. The fire is the central focus, with intense orange and yellow flames. In the foreground, several people are silhouetted against the bright light of the fire, looking towards it. The background is dark, and a shower of sparks and embers falls from the top of the frame, creating a dense, glowing rain of light. The overall atmosphere is festive and celebratory.

Bonfire Night

On 5 November, people celebrate Bonfire Night with fireworks, bonfires, and toffee apples

The Gunpowder Plot

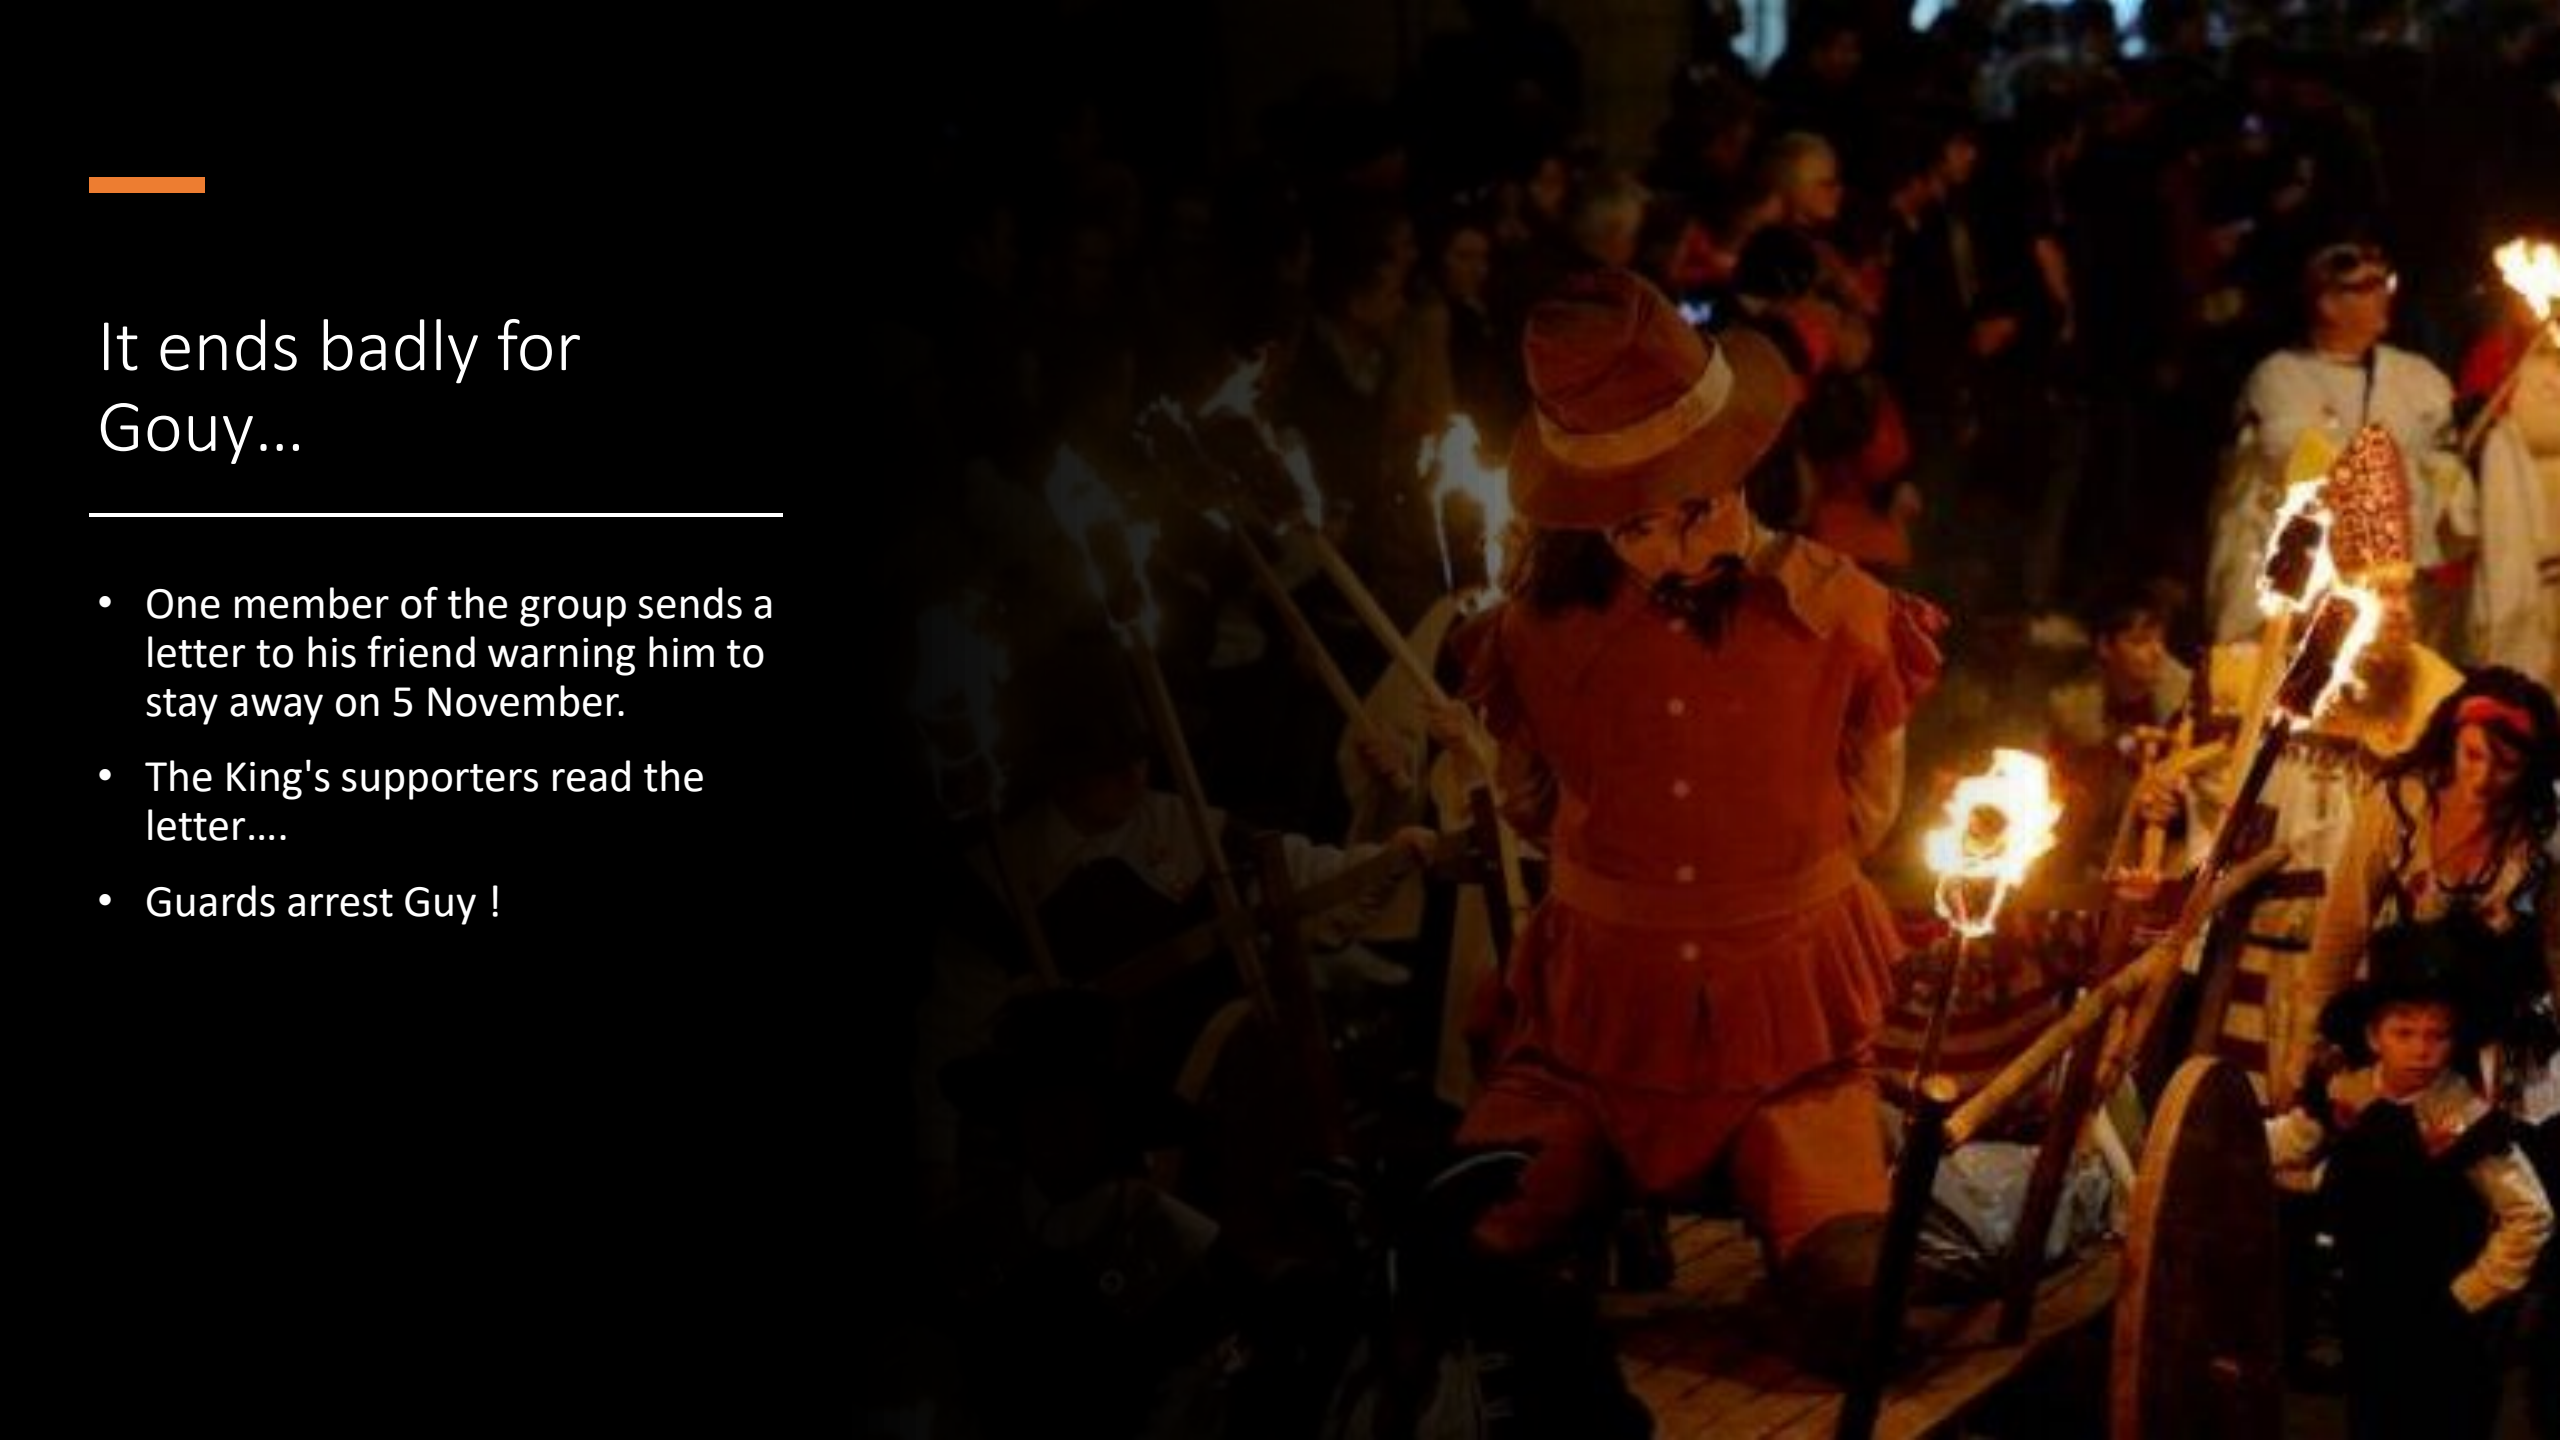

He is called the 'Guy': it is a doll that represents a man called Guy Fawkes.

The Gunpowder Plot (1605)

- Guy (Guido) Fawkes wants to blow up the Houses of Parliament
- Guy Fawkes and his group put 36 barrels of gunpowder in the cellars of the Houses of Parliament in London, ready to set off a massive explosion.

A large crowd of people at night, many holding torches, surrounding a central figure in a red outfit and hat. The scene is illuminated by the warm glow of the torches, creating a dramatic and somewhat somber atmosphere. The central figure is the focus of the crowd's attention.

It ends badly for Gouy...

- One member of the group sends a letter to his friend warning him to stay away on 5 November.
- The King's supporters read the letter....
- Guards arrest Guy !

A group of people in historical costumes, including a man in a wide-brimmed hat and a woman in a dark dress with a red floral pattern, are holding large, glowing bonfires on sticks. The scene is set at night, with the fire providing the primary light source. The background is dark, and the overall atmosphere is festive and historical.

Remember, remember

«Remember, remember the Fifth of November,
The Gunpowder Treason and Plot,
I see of no reason
Why Gunpowder Treason
Should ever be forgot.
Guy Fawkes, Guy Fawkes, t'was his intent
To blow up King and Parliament.
Three-score barrels of powder below
To prove old England's overthrow;
By God's providence he was catch'd
With a dark lantern and burning match.
Holloa boys, holloa boys, let the bells ring.
Holloa boys, holloa boys, God save the King!»
